

AMERICAN BEAVER

Once almost extinct in North America, the American beaver has made a dramatic comeback, and now can be found in Arizona. This largest native rodent in North America is covered with a thick coat of waterproof fur. Beavers live in areas of dense forests and high mountain meadows where there is abundant water. Beavers used to live along many of Arizona's desert streams and rivers.